Hi Pamela. I know that R-3 was anxious to transmit the cost estimates. Do you know whether R-3 has transmitted the Dimock cost estimates? Or is OCIR going to handle transmittal to the congressional requesters? Thanks.

Tito, when OEM forward's the final cost document to R-3, would you mention to the region to please have their congressional office coordinate with OCIR before transmitting to the congressional requesters. Thank you.

Yes and if they are not comfortable let us know. I think Mathy is also going to follow up with Shawn.

Lisa:

Any one of us (Larry, Dana T. or myself) can get your mark-up to R3. Will Mathy and you be good with having the region proceed with submitting the write-up if they are comfortable with the adjustments provided through your markup ?

Thanks,

Tito

Thanks Tito. You understood my question correctly. Given that fact, Mathy and I talked about the Dimock cost paper and would like to roll some things up and not break some thing down by detail. I have a markup. Who should I get this to so it gets to Region quickly. The detail was helpful for us to understand and we still may need to have internal discussion on scope of action memo and these costs but that shouldn't hold up getting the Dimock total project cost to date out.

Lisa:

The 2009 Action Memo guidance do not change the cost procedures from the 2001 guidance, it just repeats or reaffirms it.

If I understand your second question correctly, the congressional questions on costs incurred is looking for total costs incurred for the action, as I understand it. For that reason, the cost breakout provided accounts for those under the removal action ceiling as well as the 104b costs.

Dana, thanks for providing the summary of how costs are accounted for removal in terms of extramural and intramural. In addition to the summary, the 2001 guidance was very helpful. Barry also suggested we look at 2009 guidance which I have link to but can you verify whether or not this guidance modified the specific cost procedures that were discussed in the 2001 guidance? Also in the specific request for costs at Dimock, were they focussed on whether we have or have not exceeded ceiling or were they focussed on overall cost for all activities associated with the removal? Call if you have questions. As I said on Dimock call yesterday, we are trying to close on this today if possible. Thanks, Lisa
